Imagine a home being built for you in the 1950s and loving both it and its superb location enough to create a lifetime of memories there until 2024. That is the legacy of 15 Haig Street Burwood. The second dwelling to be built on the street, the cream brick abode takes pride of place on a prime allotment of 697m² (approx.), offering a flexible floor plan with three bedrooms and a central bathroom, a traditional kitchen, and a choice of living spaces. The first is a traditional lounge at the home's entry, whilst at the rear, a large light-filled family room adjoining an open study area enjoy a northerly aspect and views across a grassed backyard. The scope of the land allows you to extend or remodel the current accommodation if desired or, alternatively, to utilise the generous block to build a brand-new family home in a highly desired locale (STCA). You'll love the proximity to Ashburton train station, local buses, a number of educational facilities like Ashwood Secondary College, Deakin University, PLC, Holmesglen Tafe and Kingswood College, open green spaces such as Holmesglen Reserve and Gardiners Creek, and popular shopping precincts including Chadstone the Fashion Capital for all your daily, special occasion or entertainment requirements. You may ask why the current owners stayed here for so long. An inspection of this wonderful property will unlock the answers, so make sure you plan yours without delay.
