An architect-designed urban oasis, this fusion of modern/industrial style comes from Alexander Tzannes, one of Sydney's most awarded names. Originally the site of an engineering works for a piano factory in the 1920s, it's now a home of clean, contemporary detail, paying subtle homage to its history, with an ambience that feels more like a New York loft than a traditional warehouse. From the newly renovated kitchen to the lavish master bedroom and ensuite, it delivers a luxurious feeling of space, an impressive home inside and out, perfect for entertaining, with integrated courtyards on both sides.
