:: 613Sqm land parcel :: Heated Saltwater Pool :: Extensive landscaped gardens :: (3) Three living areas :: In the city of Sydney, finding the right property is about more than the price tag. For extended families looking to accommodate multiple generations under one roof, there's a list of criteria that need to be met, from the number of bedrooms and car spaces to proximity to services. This property at 23 INNES Street in Campbelltown makes it look easy. Set over three levels, including a ground floor with double garage and off street parking for two cars, the four-bedroom, two and a half-bathroom house is positioned on a 613sqm block. Carefully crafted to draw in the sunlight through both floors while maintaining privacy from the neighbours, the house has a built-in, heated saltwater pool at its heart, as well as the sublime Balinese inspired garden areas, with outdoor dining under the gazebo at the rear. The top level has the master suite, with walk-in robe and en-suite bathroom, including a spacious parents' retreat spread across the upper floor, with views to die for. Too many features to list here, this property has to be seen, everything about this home has been considered, from the well-appointed kitchen made from recycled Oregon timber with walk-in pantry to the open plan living area. Finishes are brave but neutral, making it ideal for would-be buyers to put their own stamp on. While the house sits on a beautiful tree-lined cul-de-sac, it is well connected to the main thoroughfares, railway, shops and major services are nearby. Inspection is a must, too many features to list here.
