Calmness, Simplicity and timeless appeal are some of the distinctive features to describe this original 1960's low set brick. Untouched with unbridled potential, the single level Mater Prize Home enjoys a generous feeling of space paired with a refreshing sense of functionality and practicality. With all the hallmarks of the 1960's new age living movement, this home was built in the early Australian post war opulence era where homes were made to last. Set on a wide corner block on the Banks Street Ridge, this easy level 754m² allotment is endowed with glorious north-east elevation and privacy. Located on the edge of Brisbane City in a family focused setting, the central location takes advantage of its proximity to both the Alderley and Ashgrove shopping hubs. A short walk to a trendy local cafes and multiple transport options, the main attraction is the 80 acre Bank Street reserve which connects to Brisbane's abundant park and bike-way network - an undiscovered wonderland. Other property highlights - - Mid-century low set brick with clean lines, simplicity and easy living functionality- Good size home with big rooms, wide hallway and an open, free flowing floor plan that's made for easy living- 3 bedrooms with built-ins, the master with a separate dressing room and sundeck- Multiple living spaces including lounge dining rooms separated by stand alone fireplace, TV room which opens to the front courtyard and separate rumpus area leading to the back yard - Large galley style kitchen updated in 1990 with plenty of bench and cupboard space and a casual eating booth- Well appointed bathroom with separate bath, shower, vanity and toilet rooms - oh so retro & hip at the same time - Double remote lock up car accommodation with internal access to the house- Level 754 m² corner block opening to the north-east, surprisingly private Contact Peter D'Arcy on 0412 738 009 for more information
