Looking for a cottage with character then this property is worth considering. Recorded Information indicated that the home was built in the 1950's but the construction indicates it was an earlier build. The cottage's recent history is as a dwelling and prior to that it was the 'Glenesk Bed and Breakfast'. Earlier history is vague but the home could possibly have been built in the late 1800 hundreds. Fingal has an interesting history and a Google search will reveal the details. The cottage is on a level 959m2 allotment of which the cottage is centrally located and consists of a formal lounge and a separate living room, kitchen/dining, 2 bedrooms and bathroom. A veranda with section enclosed offers extra under cover area. Of recent times there has been a number trees and shrub plantings. In the grounds there is an undercover area for the car and a garden shed. Please contact Tom to arrange an inspection.
