Owning a prestigious position in one of Armadale's most esteemed pockets, this magnificent c1935 Art Deco residence combines the era's grandeur and elegance with exceptional modern day appeal and prized future scope. Encompassing a northern corner allotment of 837sqm (approx) with pedestrian and garage access to Redcourt Avenue, the home's undeniable period grace is only the beginning. A breathtaking entrance hall sets the tone for the impressive interior, making a sophisticated statement with the central sculptural staircase. Multiple living and dining rooms provide formal and informal enjoyment, with a sun filled living room basking in the glow of an open fireplace. Every room looks out to the beautiful established gardens, offering alfresco ease to a heated spa and brick paved terraces. Custom solid timber cabinetry, a butler's pantry and twin ovens serve all family needs, including a Passover kitchen and a cool room. Upstairs, four generously sized bedrooms include the main with a walk in robe and access to a deco bathroom, whilst a study/nursery, large living space and playroom offer family versatility. Other features include two powder rooms, ample fitted storage, ducted heating and cooling, double glazed windows, laundry, and parking for four, including a double garage with additional off street parking.
