Suburb Snapshot Tucked away in Gungahlin, Casey is a newer suburb, with convenient local amenities and stunning natural surrounds. Casey Market Town is a central hub for activity in the area, and locals keep well fed and hydrated at family-friendly neighbourhood pub Casey Jones. It's an ideal spot for if you want a bit of breathing space, with a wide range of modern houses and townhouses on offer. The suburb draws its place names from notable Australian diplomats, public servants and administrators. Former Lieutenant-Governor of South Australia Walter Crocker and Sir John Overall, the former head of the National Capital Development Commission are honoured by place names in Casey.
