Fortune Favours the Bold Set on approximately 3/4 acre, this bush cottage has seen better days. Redbank is one of many small villages which are re-emerging now that many people are looking for their own little piece of the Victorian bush. Located between Avoca and St Arnaud on the Sunraysia Highway, it's about 2.5 hours from Melbourne and is firmly in the gold diggings zone, with old workings all around. There's no sugar coating it, the house needs everything. Essentially a four room cottage with a return verandah, probably about one hundred years old. It's a project or a site for a new building or total rebuild. Having said that, it's also an opportunity to create your private bush retreat at a bargain price. The setting is level, picturesque and private, with some outbuildings and a pretty dam. Power has been disconnected but is available.
