Situated nicely elevated on a quiet suburban street with a wide frontage, this sturdy double-storey brick residence with timber-cladding presents a superb street presence. The home is ready for a modern renovation, or you could simply knock it down and start fresh. There is plenty of driveway parking available, along with a double garage that comes complete with surplus storage space and a handy multipurpose room that could be used as a rumpus, workshop, or games room. Up the external set of stairs, you'll gain entry into the main living areas which offer delightful air conditioning and beautiful distressed timber floors that would look stunning with a nice fresh buff. Ready for dining or lounging, these areas both connect to a sunroom which would make the ideal reading nook or study with gorgeous views over the district and mountains beyond. The kitchen sits off in a corner and presents home cooks with plenty of storage space. Well-appointed and in good original condition, this kitchen could be revamped or completely replaced with your own bespoke design. Out the back door and down a set of stairs, you'll find a generous patio perfect for alfresco entertaining. It looks out over the large, fenced backyard where established trees offer soothing shade and lots of lawn allow little feet and paws to roam freely and safely. Returning upstairs, you'll find three timber-floored bedrooms, two with built-in robes and all with access to the original bathroom and a handy separate water closet.

Additional Features:- Downstairs powder room- Laundry in garage- Garden shed
